TASTING NOTES

One of Italy's absolute foremost and most innovative producers is, without a doubt, Enoltalia from Bardolino in Veneto. The producer was founded in the 70s and has since gone from a small friend's project to one of Italy's leading and most award-winning winemakers with both its own vineyards and long-term contracts in virtually all wine regions throughout Italy. The focus is always on the maximum amount of wine for the money, often in modern and resourceful packaging, and if the wines are not organically certified, they are always as close to natural cultivation as is possible in the origin of each wine.

Their Bardolino is a classic, light and berry blend. Fruity, slightly spicy aroma with hints of cherries, cloves, wild raspberries and herbs.
